

Dear Alice,

We hope you and your family and friends are staying safe, healthy, and well! These are challenging times - for our organizations, for the people and communities we serve, and for each of us as individual leaders and humans.

As a member of the SADS Network, you have been in our thoughts, as we know that the work that you do is critically important and - in this moment - is likely extremely difficult.

We know that some of you are on the front lines dealing with this pandemic and its impact on our society's most vulnerable.

As part of our commitment to our SADS community, we want you to know that the SADS staff is providing all our usual services--answering your questions about COVID-19 or anything else that might be of concern, providing physician referrals for patients, and doing many special programs for you and for our SADS families (see below).

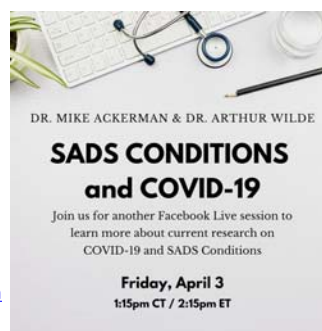

We'd love to hear from you! Please let us know if there is anything more that you think we can provide for the healthcare community, or for SADS families at this time. You can still reach us online at sads@sads.org.

Facebook Live Event

Dr. Mike Ackerman interviews a fellow SADS Foundation Scientific Advisor, Dr. Arthur Wilde from The Netherlands. They will discuss his newly-published HRS article SARS-CoV-2, COVID-19 and inherited arrhythmia syndromes.

COVID-19 Dedicated SADS Foundation Website Page

We have established a dedicated website page on our website where we are posting COVID-19 updates to help our SADS families and medical professionals to help families manage this virus and their SADS condition. We also will post on our Facebook page and other social media.

Questions About Specific Patient Issues or a Difficult Case?

Please use our SADS Foundation Scientific Advisors for any questions that may come up with patients you are seeing in this pandemic. You can email me (alice@sads.org) with your question or, for more extensive cases, please use a PowerPoint format and include HPI, family history (including pedigree if available), clinical course including current management, supporting studies (EKGs, MRI, echo, genetics), and specific questions. We will reply promptly to address concerns for your patient.
